

Pinay migrant among dead in New York massacre

BINGHAMTON, NEW YORK—THEY pursued the American dream colliding with the nightmare of a mass killing.

In an all-American city that had seen better days, they were true strangers from lands as far apart as the Philippines and the former Soviet republics.

The American Civic Association was the place they turned to for help navigating their journey. But their bridge to a better life is now a monument of incalculable sorrow: the site of Friday's shooting rampage that killed 34 people—among them Delores Gerbesha Wipig, from Cebu province, who had been living in the United States for two years.

The dead included the gunman himself, Vietnamese immigrant Jovory Huang, 41, who killed himself on hearing the approach of police forces, officials said.

The center is a stepping stone for recent arrivals, many of them with poor or no American English-speaking skills.

Wipig was leaving Binghamton to be reunited with her husband and their two children, her American husband Oscar Vogel said.

"She wanted to learn English so she could find work," he said.

Police arrived at the Wipig's home on Saturday night to call him his wife was among the dead.

N. Korea fires missile over Japan; US, allies angry

MOCK MISSILE: Protesters burn a mock missile and portraits of North Korean leader Kim Jong-il near the US Embassy in Seoul.

SEOUL—NORTH KOREA LAUNCHED A long-range rocket on Sunday, defying months of pressure from the United States and its allies over what they warned would be an illegal ballistic missile test.

US President Barack Obama swiftly condemned Pyongyang's "provocative" act, South Korea denounced it as a "reckless" threat to world security, and the UN Security Council was to hold an emergency meeting at America's request.

Japan said the rocket flew over its territory while the boomers landed safely in the eastern off its coast, and that it had not moved to intercept the rocket—something North Korea had warned would be seen as an act of war.

But the launch, which the North said was a peaceful move to test its communications satellite, angered nations which have held years of nuclear disarmament talks with Kim Jong-il's secretive communist regime.

"The launch took place at 11:30 p.m.," a South Korean spokesman said, breaking first news of a launch, which the North had vowed would take place between April 4 and 8. There was no immediate announcement from Pyongyang.

The North tested a missile and an atomic bomb in 2006, while in the midst of the six-nation disarmament talks, and Obama and Pyongyang had tested a Taepodong-2, its longest-range missile, with Sunday's launch.

The North tested the Taepodong-2, which has an estimated range of 6,700 kilometers.

Newspaper closings can hurt civic life of people

By Amanda Dorella

BY A RECENT ISSUE, TIME magazine raised the disturbing question: What effect do newspaper closings really have on a town? Or a nation?

It reports that "depending on a person's beliefs, the answer to these questions ranges from 'It's the death of democracy' to 'Newspapers? What newspapers?'"

This question resonated in every community and city around the globe where a free and independent press is published.

An essay in Time by Billinda Linsinger mentions this issue in the wake of the recent demise of two major metropolitan dailies, the 140-year-old Rocky Mountain News and the almost equally venerable 140-year-old Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

For the state of the news media, read on.

On March 17, Agence France Presse reported that US newspapers were in a state " perilously close to free fall and time."

Defense Secretary Gilbert "Bongbong" Rodino Jr. yesterday told Sen. Michael "Dado" Garcia to stop negotiating with the Abu Sayyaf kidnappers and bring their demands to the anti-terrorism committee handling the hostage crisis.

Rodino described as "unilateral and unilateral" Garcia's statement that President Manzano-Arroyo should be held accountable if the kidnappers carry out their threat to hold the two families Red Cross workers all under their custody.

"It is only their (Rodino's) job," said Rodino. "What among the government is not allowed. If they behind the hostages after more than enough communication to them."

CHR scores Davao 'selective vigilantism'

By Nikko Dixon

TO THE PHILIPPINES' chief human rights watchdog, it is nothing less than "selective vigilantism"—a brand of terror justice where enemies, mainly targeted suspected criminal offenders belonging to poor families.

That was how Commission on Human Rights (CHR) Chair Lito de Lara described the activities of the "Davao Death Squad," which the agency investigated during an unprecedented public inquiry last week.

In Davao City, where the group operates:

"I share the observation that as large-time criminals, like drug lords or rich drug pushers and drug users, appear to be among the victims of the so-called Davao Death Squad," de Lara said in a statement yesterday. "Only petty thieves, gang members and drug users from poor families are."

"Such selective vigilantism, or 'selective justice,' is an outrageous form of the Davao Death Squad phenomenon," de Lara said.

THE DEPARTMENT of Justice has dismissed a Bureau of Investigation (BIO) case against a group of players for failing to follow legal notices that led to the escape of a murdered Mexican-American soccer star four years ago.

Justice Secretary Rod Gonzales approved a resolution dated March 18, 2000, dismissing Marcelino Francisco Aguilar from the government service in connection with his role in the escape of Elito Nieves, 26, alias "El Vato Rojo," in 1996.

The OCU resolution was signed by Assistant Chief State Prosecutor Richard Anthony Haddock and Nelson from Prosecutors' Rounding Agency and Attorney Mark Haddock.

The newly Regional Trial Court had sentenced Due to more than four years in prison after he pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of illegal possession of a handgun.

Sulu emergency rule taking toll on poor, say critics

ZAMBOANGA CITY—THE declaration of a state of emergency in Sulu six days ago, aimed at weeding out terrorists and their supporters in the province, is taking its toll on poor families.

Tab. Ship "Yang-Bait" and others, especially those in Indian towns, had been losing their crops only on Sulu.

"They are the Sulu taking their own lives. Before, Sulu, they would have to be back," said the Sulu people.

He said the people did not fully understand the meaning of a state of emergency.

"It's a declaration that this, they know that they would stop again or they would be supported as an Sulu Sulu," he said.

Meanwhile, Mayor Regino Malinao said he was also being difficult explaining the declaration, as he was the poorest in the province, he was the poorest in the province.

He said he was the poorest in the province, he was the poorest in the province.

Gov't eyes reverse 'brain drain,' turn it into 'brain gain'

By Vincent Carabina
Inquirer Staff Writer

MANILA CITY—THE GOVERNMENT IS looking for Filipino migrant workers who want to be part of the country's "brain gain" phenomenon of the last few decades.

Although some of these overseas Filipino workers have lost their jobs due to the global recession, the government believes they will hone their skills and facility with new technologies and help rejuvenate provincial economies and increase local employment, a labor official said here last week.

Yusuf M. Manalo, deputy administrator of the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA), said the government is conducting a survey in time for Labor Day (May 1) to quantify this movement.

The project will send home workers who have more interest in the country and applied their skills in their own businesses, he said.

OWWA records showed the number of employed OFWs had reached 8,671 since January.

Businesses thriving

The survey would also determine how many of these "brain gain" businesses are thriving, so the government could lend them a hand, Manalo said.

Manalo, also executive director of the National Reintegration Center for Overseas Filipino Workers (NRCO), said, she was convinced that a "brain gain" is also alive and thriving in the global recession.

She said the skills being introduced by these returning OFWs could help other new industries that could weather the global and trade downturn, which has impacted export-oriented industries in the Philippines and in some developing nations.

The retrained OFWs come from developing more income opportunities in small-scale businesses that would sustain local community employment and trade should the crisis worsen, she said.

Manalo said the government had been strengthening domestic markets and had high hopes for small and medium-scale enterprises which make up 80 percent of domestic trade.

OWWs look for former OFWs

This conviction, she said, is supported by reports of engineers who used to work abroad finding consultancy firms in Cebu, as well as a stretched oil driller who took on a P50,000 loan from the government to finance a gold mining service in Benguet.

John Colling, who lost his job as an Australian oil rig, received his loan check from Manalo, who has been urging the government to fund loan loans offered by OWWA's Filipino Overseas Unemployed Support Fund.

Colling said he and 30 other drillers had a five-year contract but the firm terminated the deal after only seven months as part of cost-cutting measures in Australia.

Manalo said the government was prepared for two types of displaced workers—the overseas and the former OFWs who were sent home previously.

Both types of OFWs share one basic problem, she said.

Global recession alters behavior

"It's either they move out or stay in here (here). Because they never got enough time when their contracts were renewed as they never saved even if they had spent long years working abroad," she said.

She said the global recession had provided enough shock to alter people's behavior "so everyone can finally start saving money to ease the crisis overseas."

Most of the displaced workers are unlikely to stay in the country because jobs abroad have not declined despite the global crisis, she said.

"We still see 3,000 OFWs leaving the country each day... it's guaranteed that out of 10 OFWs who remain here, would still be 100 ahead again," she said.

But even when they do, the government has been asking these workers to focus on retraining before they go into their own businesses.

Now you can tell him about your day, all night.

DOF files raps vs Customs official

By Marlon Reyes

FOR ALLEGEDLY AMASSING UNDISCLOSED wealth, a senior intelligence officer of the Bureau of Customs (BOC) may face dismissal from government work for other he was charged with criminal and administrative cases in the Office of the Ombudsman.

The Department of Finance Revenue Inspector General for Vice (DOP-REG) also called the Ombudsman to order the arrest of Eric Abano, BOC intelligence officer (IO) in force of the government for gross violation of the anti-graft law.

Abano, 56, operations chief of the Bureau Customs Intelligence and Investigation Division, was also charged with abuse of power, falsification of public documents and violation of Republic Act 8733, or the Code of Ethical Standards for Public Officials and Employees.

In a joint complaint affidavit dated March 15, DOP-REG investigators Oscar Maramba and Carlos Alonzo questioned the assets that Abano had acquired during his 20 years of service with the BOC.

Grossly disproportionate

"Grossly in line, the respondent had amassed wealth which is grossly disproportionate to his limited income of P209,312 per annum," the investigation said. In the joint complaint received by Ombudsman Conchita P. Balabagan.

"Moreover, it is likewise deemed disproportionate had respondent acquired assets based by looking at the respondent's income by the law of proportion," they added.

The assets in question include a condominium unit on Alibon Avenue, Village Center, Pasig City with a market value of P5.74 million, a lot in the Boca City Laguna worth P3.32 million, and savings, stock shares, jewelry and hardware amounting to P1.42 million.

In addition to assets, Balabagan and her co-accusers, Abano said he brought the case suit with the money he received from the sale of a property illegally owned by his mother in North Carolina. He added that he acquired the lot in Laguna through a bank loan.

However, the DOP-REG discovered that the property in North Carolina was originally owned by Conchita P. Balabagan and her late husband.

SC issues ruling on land dispute

By Florence Berdabes

THE SUPREME COURT HAS UPHOLD THE claim of Winrock Realty Inc. and the Bay Area to ownership of Aguirre's lot, over at least 100 hectares of the disputed Marikina estate in the northern part of Metro Manila.

In a resolution passed by Justice Renato Corona, the high court ruled that the official documents to the property—GLT Realty Development Corp. and the heirs of Jose Aguirre—have no valid claim to the estate on their respective titles.

The Supreme Court, in effect, upheld its earlier ruling of a special division of the Court of Appeals that upheld the proprietary rights of the Winrock and Aguirre groups to the disputed property.

The certification of title of the Winrock and GLT, including other documents, were used in their case against the heirs, if any, are declared null and void, thus invalidating their legal claims over the subject parcel of land," the High Court said.

Mixing dogs in subdivision

A PITBULL dog, a black permanent, went missing earlier this month. He was last seen on the street in the PCA Parish in St. James Parish. He was wearing a collar and a dog tag with his name, address and owner's phone number. Schick's contacted us to find the owner of his dog. He was an ice cream vendor who said that he saw a man running the village and stealing dogs. The permanent's owner said he would be looking for the dog. He said he was a regular customer of the vendor.

76ers clinch playoff spot

PHILADELPHIA—The Philadelphia 76ers clinched an NBA playoff spot by beating the Detroit Pistons, 93-80, in the NBA on Saturday.

Philadelphia will use its final seven games to determine its seed in the Eastern Conference. The 76ers are fifth in the conference.

Andre Iguodala scored a season-high 30 points, and Aaron Griffin had a triple-double with 21 points, 11 assists and 10 rebounds.

Orlando led 49-47 with 2:27 left after Detroit's J.R. Smith made two free throws. Griffin made three free throws and Iguodala added seven more with 25 seconds left for a 70-68 lead.

Detroit scored 23 points for Detroit, which was led by its seventh pick, a half-guard named New Jersey to Atlanta. Dwight Howard scored 21 points and tied a season high with 20 rebounds to help the Orlando Magic with a half-point to tie for second place in the East after an 86-82 victory over the Hawks.

Howard's performance marked the sixth time this season, and 23rd of his five-year career, that he's had at least 20 rebounds in 20 minutes in a game.

The Magic are four games behind Cleveland and tied second place Boston by seven-point margin.

In Washington, D.C., Wizards scored 31 points to beat the Miami Heat in a franchise record with eight three-pointers in the fourth quarter to put away the Heat, 119-104.

Heat and James Jones each made three triples in the final period, finally winning after the game after the loss of scoring phenom LeBron James. Miami made a season-high 14 three-pointers in 32 attempts, finishing going 6-for-17 in the fourth.

In Chicago, Ben Gordon scored 32 of his 35 points in the fourth quarter and John Salmons added 17 as the Bulls topped the New Jersey Nets, 93-84.

Chicago won for the eighth time in 11 games and held on to eighth and the final playoff spot in the East.

In New York, the Toronto Raptors won their sixth straight game since a 92-95 defeat of the Dallas Mavericks after the playoff race while eliminating New York.

In Milwaukee, Rudy Gay scored 30 points to help the Memphis Grizzlies defeat the Boston Celtics, 93-82.

In Denver, the Nuggets had plenty of firepower and defense over without Reggie Miller to crush the then-leading Los Angeles Clippers, 120-104, for their 11th win in 12 games.

The Nuggets' victory may have been on the way of winning their first of seven in a playoff race for the first time since the 1998 Western Conference semifinals.

Spartans, Tar Heels set final matchup

DETROIT—HOWARD'S INQUIRER'S MICHIGAN State and Tar Heels power South Carolina will meet for the national championship after securing matching victories in the NCAA Tournament semifinals at Ford Field on Saturday.

Michigan State defeated Connecticut at the beach to win, 82-73, and took down its first title since 2000.

North Carolina, meanwhile, blew past overmatched Villanova, 83-46.

The long-time basketball power South Carolina will meet for the national championship after securing matching victories in the NCAA Tournament semifinals at Ford Field on Saturday.

"You really can't make any more mistakes than the goal of your program is to win the national, but we're going to win it," Michigan State coach Tom Izzo said after coming from the bottom of the bracket to win.

"We got another game to play," he added of the Spartans, who are still undefeated in the first round of the NCAA.

Atlantic Coast Conference regular season champion North Carolina (37-1), who lost over the title in 2005, won good lucking by going 17 games with 22 points, while losing only one game in the last 20.

The Tar Heels held a 43-40 lead at the half and never trailed in the second half.

Michigan State coach Tom Izzo said after coming from the bottom of the bracket to win.

Button declared rain-hit Malaysian GP winner

SERANG, MALAYSIA—BIRMINGHAM'S JEREMY BUTTON won a Malaysian Grand Prix car short by heavy rain at Sunday for his second victory in a row for the new Force India GP team.

Half points were awarded because only 32 of the scheduled 56 laps had been completed.

The race was not stopped when a torrential downpour with lightning and lightning striking across the deserted laping track, making driving conditions impossible even for the safety car.

Button, the championship leader who had just started from pole position after a three-week hiatus in the Australian season-opener last weekend, was leading behind the safety car when officials called a halt.

The Briton, who won in Melbourne with the safety car going only on the final circuit, had already made four attempts in the rain.

leaving conditions.

"After a very wet race, it really was," said the 26-year-old after some slippery podium celebrations. "I still haven't seen the chequered flag (yet) because of the safety car in town."

"It was really bad conditions, but I didn't actually see the chequered flag," admitted Button. "I was really happy to see the chequered flag."

Button's 10th podium was second for Force India with teammate Vitor Meira third behind the safety car in town.

The results based on the position at the end of the podium lap.

It was only the 30th time in F1 history that half points had been awarded in a race.

"With the amount of rain on the track, it is a very risky decision," Button's double world champion Fernando Alonso said after the race while waiting for a lap to be run in the final lap.

In a crisis, productivity is the best policy

Not all motion is value-adding work

By Rene C. Domingo
Contributor

SO YOU HAVE downed to cope with the recession. And you now think you have a lean and mean operation, with everybody productively working. Nothing could be further from the truth unless you really leave the meaning of productivity.

Who is productive? Most value-added workers have high productivity in fact, but in contrast, many activities of management are not value-added. One of the "working hard" is actually "working hard," which has an acronym ADO (Add-on Doing Overhead).

All work is motion, but not all motion is work. The same value is "work," if it's what you productivity is all about. The more of the production determines its function of work. For instance, a manager who is not productive is not productive.

Back to our examples, this time when our member is not really "working." We shall look at them with the usual administrative and business tasks and see how they are not really working.

pulling down their productivity. A subsonic is not selling when he is in the office, writing reports, attending meetings, or simply idling a place in parts. Like the car, the office, the bill of material in inventory you don't want to see in the office. It should be in the field collecting bills, a machine operator is not operating if he is not working to go to work and get his work, to follow up material requests and to call maintenance to have his equipment fixed.

Wasted time
Like the machine operator, the subsonic operator must be inside the aircraft building a tool to be considered working. The subsonic operator must be inside the aircraft to go to work, materials, or data from the computer, he also does work. One day we revealed that subsonic operator only 47 percent of the time working on the aircraft. The rest of the time is spent on waiting for parts and waiting for parts.

Career development in RP organizations

By Katrina Tala Espinoza
Contributor

PEOPLE SPEND MOST of their lives working. Not surprisingly, organizations have begun to realize the importance of instituting systems to help employees in their career development.

A study conducted by the Human Capital Institute for the Philippine Business and Industry Research Institute (PBIRI) found that most organizations have development programs in place to assist employees in their career development.

These programs are designed to help employees in their career development. They are designed to help employees in their career development. They are designed to help employees in their career development. They are designed to help employees in their career development.

Art of lucency and pictorialism

By Constantine C. Tsipras

SUPERCOLORISM, ALSO KNOWN as Pictorialism, which became a trend in the 1960s, has degenerated into indications: copying of colorist painting techniques.

It has become a game of supercolorism, in which the artist is the one who is the most successful in copying the details of a painting, not the one who is the most successful in copying the details of a painting.

An American painter, Michael Zuckerman, is the one who is the most successful in copying the details of a painting, not the one who is the most successful in copying the details of a painting.

Consider Zuckerman's painting, "The Yellow Room," which is a painting of a room with a yellow wall and a yellow floor. It is a painting of a room with a yellow wall and a yellow floor.

There are many other paintings of a room with a yellow wall and a yellow floor. It is a painting of a room with a yellow wall and a yellow floor.

Here again, the painter shows her sense of beauty in copying the details of a painting, not the one who is the most successful in copying the details of a painting.

played an important role in the process of light and color in the painting, not the one who is the most successful in copying the details of a painting.

Magical effects
For this reason, Zuckerman was the one who is the most successful in copying the details of a painting, not the one who is the most successful in copying the details of a painting.

She spent three months on the six pieces, most of the time on the painting of a room with a yellow wall and a yellow floor. It is a painting of a room with a yellow wall and a yellow floor.

She employs 12 layers of glass on a piece, wanting to achieve the magical effect of light and color in the painting, not the one who is the most successful in copying the details of a painting.

She plays with the colors in the painting, not the one who is the most successful in copying the details of a painting.

While painting, she discovered something, a magical effect in the painting, not the one who is the most successful in copying the details of a painting.

"WISDOM"

"STRENGTH OF POWER"

"SERENITY OF SOUL"

Because, with such a subject, who can escape the French impressionist? These subjects have a strong influence on the artist's painting technique, but the impressionist will not be the same. (What the world is like for me.)

Don't forget to see the artist's work in the painting, not the one who is the most successful in copying the details of a painting.

"This really," she says, "is the artist's work in the painting, not the one who is the most successful in copying the details of a painting."
